

February 2008

Werner Sutanto

Werner Sutanto is the Managing Director of WiMAX Program Office Southeast Asia, Intel Corporation. He currently serves on the Board of Directors of several technology companies. He was formerly a Director with Intel Capital - a strategic investment arm of Intel Corporation - responsible for Southeast Asian investment. His other positions with Intel include Asia Pacific Sales Director for Intel Dialogic and Country Manager of Intel Indonesia Corporation based in Jakarta, where he established the first Intel business operations in Indonesia.

Prior to Intel, Werner held various regional positions in Asia, Europe and Australia. He was Asia Pacific marketing and operations Director for AMP's strategic businesses (now Tyco Electronics), the technology strategist with News International in London, and Asia Pacific regional marketing for the publishing & imaging subsidiary of Kodak.

Werner graduated in Electrical Engineering and Computer Systems Engineering from Monash University in Australia.