

Ndaula Sulah is a specialist in ICT for Rural development - with over 10 years in telecenter work within the African contexts especially the eastern African region. He is iconic in the establishment of Eastern African National Telecentre Networks. His main area of orientation include; networking, knowledge management and ICT best fits for rural Africa. He holds a Masters in Management Studies (MMS), an MBA - International Business (MBA-IB), Post graduate diploma in Project Planning and Management (PG-PPM) and Bachelors Degree in Agriculture (Bsc. Agric). He is a co-founder and the executive director of UgaBYTES - a telecentre support network; founder of MoMEALS.org - an SMS platform that connects farmers and buyers directly; founder of The Manager Limited - a news paper that informs, connects and inspires Ugandans in best practices in management.